Eat My Dust!

Henry Ford's First Race

by Monica Kulling
illustrated by Richard Walz

Dear Parents,

Welcome to the fascinating world of non-fiction! Here you will find natural science, biography, history, sports . . . and more.

STEP INTO READING® NON-FICTION READERS include a huge selection of high-interest topics to engage young readers. No child can resist finding out about such topics as:

- Animals, both fuzzy and fierce
- Brave, bold, and brainy people
- Wild weather, such as twisters
- Life in the time of ice mummies or the Age of Dinosaurs
- Supersized trucks that leap into the air

Why should children read non-fiction? The benefits are enormous. First, children build their vocabularies, encountering words that may not come up in ordinary conversation but are needed to increase reading comprehension.

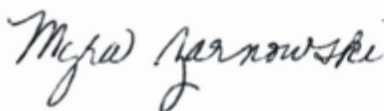

Second, non-fiction introduces children to a writing style that supports learning. When explaining new concepts, non-fiction writers often compare one thing with another. Comparisons make learning easy and fun.

Third, children build their store of background information. Context helps readers make important content connections, whether they are reading about history, biography, or natural science.

Last but not least, non-fiction books raise questions and motivate children to find answers.

The Common Core State Standards call on us to prepare children for college and careers by teaching them to read, write, and discuss non-fiction. STEP INTO READING® NON-FICTION READERS can help children meet this goal while enjoying informative, age-appropriate books.

Happy reading!

Eat My Dust!

Henry Ford's First Race

by Monica Kulling
illustrated by Richard Walz

Random House  New York

Henry Ford liked to drive.
He liked to drive into town.
People got excited
when they saw him.

“There is that crazy Henry driving his horseless buggy again,” they said.

Ladies ran for the sidewalk.

Men leaped for cover.

Dogs barked.

Horses reared.

Henry liked driving into town.

Henry had built
his car by himself.
It ran on gas.
It did not have brakes.
Henry stopped his car
by turning off the engine.
Then he jumped out.

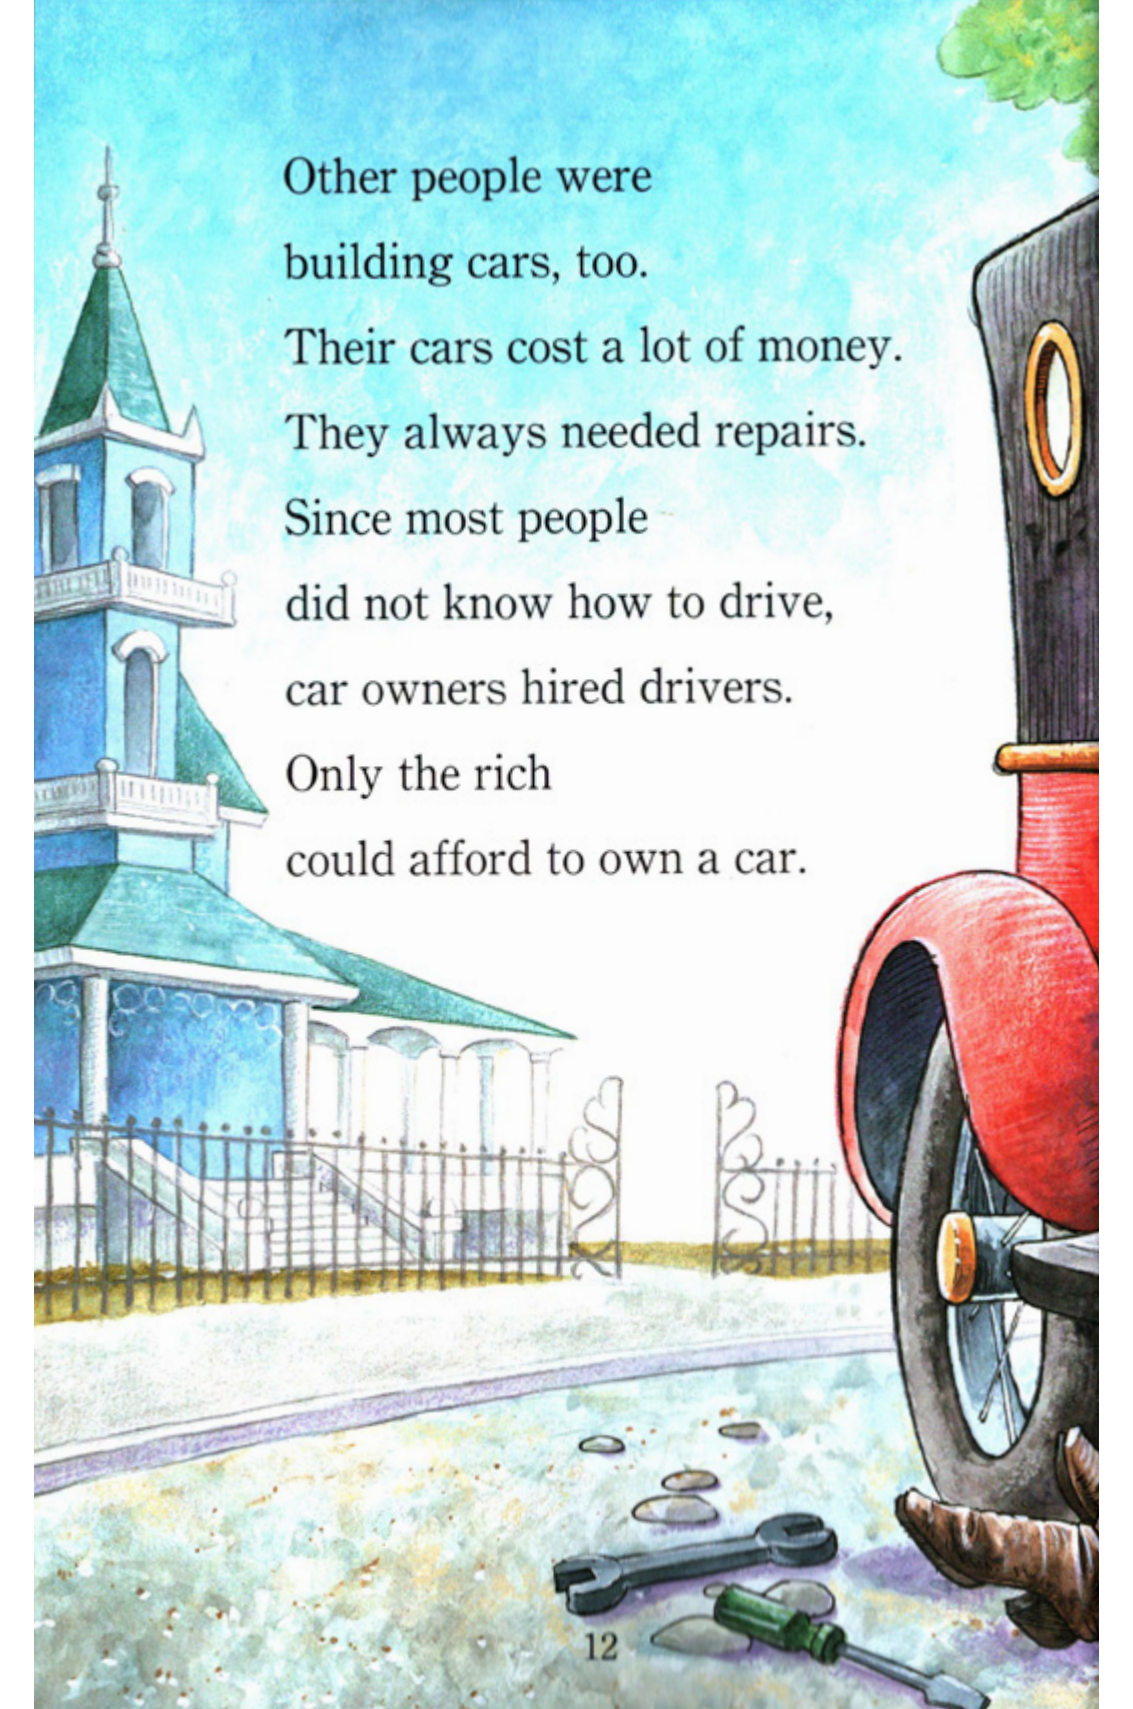

Henry tied his car to a post—
just like a horse—
so it would not roll away.

Everyone wished Henry would go back to driving a horse and buggy.
But Henry loved cars.
He loved driving them.
And he loved building them.

Other people were building cars, too.
Their cars cost a lot of money.
They always needed repairs.
Since most people
did not know how to drive,
car owners hired drivers.
Only the rich
could afford to own a car.

STEP INTO READING®

Henry Ford likes to drive. He even builds his own car. But will he win the big race?
